

Abstract

High-resolution observations of multiple water maser transitions with ALMA and e-MERLIN cover a wide range of excitation states, mapping physical conditions in evolved star winds on au scales. This shows how the clumpy mass loss evolves from close to the stellar surface through dust formation to far out in the stellar wind.